Two extensive and comprehensive volumes.

By Ned Middleton

I have already given both of these books individual 5 Star ratings in separate reviews and will now condense those comments into a single review covering both products - as offered here.

Ships

"Jane's" is possibly the world's leading authority on ships especially, though not exclusively, naval ships of the world. In this special edition of the warships of WW2 we find the full specifications of each vessel, its machinery and armament. Changes to those specifications plus any difference between ships of the same class are also included. Each chapter is a different country and we commence with a waterline profile of that country's entire fleet followed by individual classes of ships from more or less from the biggest to the smallest. For the vast majority we have a detailed profile and deck view of each class of ship with all parts numbered and named. Additionally, in most cases the publishers have been able to include at least one photograph (often more than one) of each type of ship. However, the publishers do point out that some of these pictures are of an inferior quality but are included in the interests of completeness because no other pictures are available. Various engineering and gunnery notes are also found in addition to more general information of the fate of each vessel.

Aircraft

Divided into the four parts; A, B, C and D, this exhaustive study of the army, naval and civil air forces of all nations involved in the 1944-45 conflict comes complete with an explanation of their organisational structure and the addresses of their various commands and governing departments. Part A is; A Review of the World's Air Power 1944-45 in which the countries are set out under 45 headings in alphabetical order. Instead of Great Britain, however, we find the heading; British Commonwealth of Nations; (1) British Empire, GB, Southern Rhodesia and India and (2) Self Governing Dominions; Canada, Australia New Zealand, South Africa and Eire. I was not aware that Eire was a British Dominion and I am not able to clarify this particular choice of listing. Part B is; A Review of the World's Civil Aviation 1944-45 - set out in similar format. Part C is; 'All the World's Aeroplanes' and lists the aircraft of 28 countries in, once again, alphabetical order. Part D lists; 'All the World's Aero Engines' with 12 countries included.

As for the content, there are those who always seem to judge these works on the few errors they claim to have found. These are reprints of the original books - as first published by Jane's in 1945 or thereabouts and, although the publishers will have been satisfied with the accuracy of the content - at that time!, it is quite likely that different information in some instances emerged in later years. Nevertheless, I regard these two works as the typical 5 star material produced by Jane's which are now made available to those of us who will be unable to source an original copy.
